Cutting for
Stone

A novel by the author of MY OWN COUNTRY

The ascendance of technology in medical culture often leaves patients with a sense that their personhood is of less interest than their disease. In this lecture, Dr. Verghese advocates for a new humanism in medicine.

Abraham Verghese is Senior Associate Chair and Professor for the Theory and Practice of Medicine at Stanford University School of Medicine and author of the NY Times bestseller, Cutting for Stone. Books will be sold at the event, and a book signing will take place after the lecture.
